10 Must-see holiday events in Boston

The temperatures are dipping and snowstorms are on the horizon, which can only mean one thing: the holiday season is in full swing. Sure, we haven't stuffed our faces with turkey yet, nor have (most of us) decked the halls, but it's really never too early to start thinking about ways to have fun during this cheerful season. From concerts to theater shows and so much more, here are 10 holiday events you don't want to miss in Boston this year.

'Black Nativity'

Head to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, this holiday season for special presentations of "Black Nativity." Presented in partnership with the National Center of Afro American Artists, the showings will feature 15-minute vignettes from the famed song-play by Langston Hughes, which highlights the themes of love, community and peace. Nov. 20 & Dec. 11, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, 465 Huntington Ave., mfa.org

'The Nutcracker'

Let the Boston Ballet whisk you away to a winter wonderland with their annual production of "The Nutcracker."

Choreographed by Mikko Nissinen and featured the legendary music of Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky, this show will transport audiences of all ages to a magical world of toy soldiers, sugar plum fairies and dancing bears. The show kicks off its month-long run Nov. 29 at the Citizens Bank Opera House. Nov. 29-Dec. 29, Citizen Bank Opera House, 539 Washington St., bostonballet.org

Blink!

Faneuil Hall will once again get a stunning makeover just in time for the holidays when Blink! returns for the season. The free light and sound experience begins its annual run on Dec. 3 with a special tree lighting ceremony, which will be broadcast live on WBZ. The festivities will include a performance by Amanda Mena, the 17-year-old Lynn native who was a runner-up on the 13th season of "America's Got Talent." The Wellesley Community Choir is also set to perform, while a visit from Santa is planned for the evening as well. Dec. 3-Jan. 1, Faneuil Hall Marketplace, 4 S Market St., faneuilhallmarketplace.com

Holiday Pops

Keith Lockhart will once again lead the Boston Pops in a series of holiday performances this season. The shows include classic holiday music favorites, sing-alongs, as well as a visit from Santa. Kids matinee shows are scheduled throughout December for the little ones, and a special New Year's Eve show is also on the schedule featuring the Boston Pops Swing Orchestra and The Hot Sardines. Dec. 4-31, Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Ave., bso.org

Moscow Ballet

For one night only, the Moscow Ballet will ship up to Boston for quite the Christmas spectacular. Stop by the Wang Theatre on Dec. 6 to check out their performance of the "Great Russian Nutcracker." The show features over 200 stunning costumes, gorgeous set pieces and a whole lot of fun perfect for families looking for a holiday celebration. Dec. 6, Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., bochcenter.org

Mariah Carey

All we want for Christmas is to see Mariah Carey belt out her holiday hits in person. Fans will get a chance to do just that this year as the beloved diva heads to Boston this season as part of her "All I Want For Christmas Is You Tour," presented by Hallmark Channel, which heads to the Wang Theatre on Dec. 13. The singing icon will be joined by DJ Suss One. Dec. 13, Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., bochcenter.org

Jingle Ball

Jingle Ball is back to take over the TD Garden this winter, and boy do they have a show in store for music fans. A who's who of today's top stars are set to perform this year, including Halsey, 5SOS, Niall Horan, Charlie Puth, Lizzo and Why Don't We. Dec. 15, TD Garden, 100 Legends Way, tdgarden.com

'White Christmas'

Irving Berlin's musical adaptation of the classic film will set up shop in Boston just in time for the holiday season. Be sure to catch the show as it takes over the Wang Theatre in December, as

"White Christmas" offers audiences a chance to check this amazing story of a song-and-dance team who perform at a magical Vermont inn. Dec. 17-29, Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., bochcenter.org

'Urban Nutcracker'

This show offers a uniquely Boston spin on the classic "Nutcracker" tale. Anthony Williams' "Urban Nutcracker" is a modern interpretation of the story, featuring a small live orchestra with the music of Tchaikovsky as well as the sounds of Duke Ellington, blended with ballet, hip hop, flamenco and other types of dance. The show is a true holiday spectacular. Dec. 19-28, Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont St., bochcenter.org

Disney on Ice

After you've seen all your favorites on Disney+, get off the couch and spend an evening with these classic characters in person at Disney on Ice. The all-ages show will bring audiences to "Worlds of Enchantment" as performers showcase their skills on skates while dressed as all sorts of beloved Disney characters. Dec. 20-29, Agganis Arena, 925 Commonwealth Ave., agganisarena.com

Bill Burr admits he's actually a 'Star Wars' fan

The Canton comedian talks "The Mandalorian" and Comics Come Home. MATT JUUL

When it was announced Bill Burr would play a laser gun toting space outlaw in "The Mandalorian," the new "Star Wars" show streaming on Disney+, fans of the franchise were both excited and a bit skeptical.

Having the A-list comic join this galaxy far, far away seemed like an odd choice considering he's poked fun at "Star Wars" a lot over the years. Burr famously told Conan O'Brien in 2015 that he thought the series was "like a cheesy self-help book put in outer space with, like, muppets," noting how he never understood the hype since he didn't get a chance to see the movies as a kid, only watching them with "perspective" later in life as an adult.

Well, despite all his critiques, it turns out that Burr is actually a fan of "Star Wars," which he confessed to Metro while backstage at Comics Come Home last weekend.

"Oh no, I'm a fan of the series," Burr said, with the caveat that he's "more of a sports guy" who likes sci-fi movies like "Blade Runner" and "Moon."

The veteran comedian has said in previous interviews that it was Jon Favreau's spaghetti western-style vision for "The Mandalorian" that convinced him to come aboard. Clearly, it was this unique take that caught Burr's eye.

"The way they're doing this one, it's awesome," Burr said. "I always made fun of 'Star Wars' just because I like getting guys like you going. That's all."

As for his latest appearance in this galaxy at Comics Come Home, Burr brought the laughs to the TD Garden last weekend for the annual benefit's 25th-anniversary show. Burr once again joined Denis Leary and

"The way they're doing this one, it's awesome. I always made fun of 'Star Wars' just because I like getting guys like you going. That's all."

Cam Neely at the event, capping off a lineup of guests and performers, which included Michael J. Fox, John Mulaney, Pete Holmes and a number of other comedy stars. The evening, which was in support of The Cam Neely Foundation for Cancer Care, also saw Leary receive his own day in Boston, with Mayor Marty

DISNEY PLUS

Walsh in attendance to bestow the honor.

Looking back on his past Comics Come Home performances, Burr is grateful for having the opportunities to meet his favorite Bruins players at the shows, including the legendary Neely.

"Cam Neely is the only guy from an entire generation of NHL players that can actually say he owned Patrick Roy, and he did," Burr said. "I felt like he turned it around."

"That's probably been the coolest thing, all the former Bruins I get to meet," he added, noting encounters with some of his favorite players like Chris Nilan and Rick Middleton. "I've gotten to meet a lot of the Bruins I used to watch at the old Garden."

Boston Calling announces heavy-hitting headliners for its 2020 show this week, and boy do they rock

The annual festival returns to the Harvard Athletic Complex this Memorial Day weekend with a pair of legendary bands leading the charge. Topping this year's lineup will be none other than the Foo Fighters and Red Hot Chili Peppers. That's right, Dave Grohl and his gang of Grammy-winning musicians will ship up to the Hub along with Anthony Kiedis, Flea and the rest of the red hot Rock and Roll Hall of Famers.

"Boston is such a great city for rock music, and we are so proud to bring some of the most important rock artists of all time to Boston Calling next Memorial Day Weekend," Boston Calling Events, LLC co-founder and CEO Brian Appel said in a release. "We have worked for years to bring the Foo Fighters and Red Hot Chili Peppers to the festival, and this year everything lined up perfectly. We couldn't be happier, and will complement them with an incredibly diverse lineup of artists throughout the festival weekend."

It's an exciting time for both bands heading into the new year, as the Foo Fighters will celebrate their 25th anniversary in 2020. Meanwhile, the Red Hot Chili Peppers are currently working on their first album in over three years, so expect to hear a few new tunes when they come to Boston this spring.

The pair of high-profile bands will join over 60 other acts who will perform at Boston Calling in 2020. The rest of the lineup is set to be announced some time in January.

It sounds like the upcoming fest will be one of the biggest yet. According to a release, Boston Calling will be expanding its amount of VIP and platinum viewing areas, and will once again feature an eclectic mix of music, comedy, food and more.

Speaking of seats, a limited amount of presale tickets are currently on sale, which means it's the perfect time to snag some stocking stuffers for the music lover in your life. Three-day general admission tickets are available for $239 each, while VIP and platinum passes are available for $549 and $1049, respectively.

Boston Calling is set to return Memorial Day weekend, May 22-24. For more information, check out bostoncalling.com MATT JUUL

Metro's winter concert guide

With the clock running out on 2019, these last days will be marked by staying warm between holiday obligations. Here are some great concerts coming to the Boston area this winter.

Lucy Dacus

Singer-songwriter Lucy Dacus is having an incredible moment right now. As well as being a part of the indie-rock supergroup boygenius with Phoebe Bridgers and Julien Baker, her 2018 album "Historian" was a revelation and fully announced her as one of the best young artists working today. The word is getting out on Dacus, as Lana Del Rey recently asked her to open one of her shows and even lent a hand to perform Dacus' epic "Night Shift." Dacus released a new EP "2019" and will be playing the Royale this December. Dec. 4, 2019, Royale, 279 Tremont St., royaleboston.com

Cher

Okay, seeing Cher perform a mix of her own impressive career of hits would be something pretty amazing to begin with. But on her "Here We Go Again" tour, the singular performer will also be playing a selection of hits from the Swedish pop greats, ABBA. To make things even better, every date on this tour will be opened by Nile Rodgers and CHIC. I don't know what else you have planned on Dec. 8, but maybe you should cancel those plans to hit up this show. Dec. 8, 2019, TD Garden, 100 Legends Way, tdgarden.com

The Bouncing Souls

This winter, the New Jersey punk institution The Bouncing Souls will be hitting the road to celebrate 30 years. They'll be bringing along some of their friends as well with The Bronx, The Bar Stool Preachers and Strike Anywhere. This tour is for all of the "True Believers" out there. Dec. 12, 2019, Royale, 279 Tremont St., royaleboston.com

Celine Dion

What can really be said about Celine Dion? The legendary singer will be descending upon the TD Garden for two special shows to sing all of the hits from her entire career. Expect to get emotional while shouting along to the chorus of "My Heart Will Go On" with a group of friends or thousands of strangers. Dec. 13-14, 2019, TD Garden, 100 Legends Way, tdgarden.com.

Ryley Walker / Chris For-

syth / Garcia Peoples

In the past few years, indie rock has seen a resurgence in artists who are unabashedly influenced by the jammier side of musical experimentation. In other words, artists who share more in common with the Grateful Dead than they do with The Pixies. Next month, Great Scott will host this incredible bill with experimental songwriter Ryley Walker, guitar genius Chris Forsyth and the adventurous band Garcia Peoples. Dec. 27, 2019, Great Scott, 1222 Commonwealth Ave., great-scottboston.com

Chance the Rapper with Lil Yachty

Valentine's Day doesn't have to be a day shared with your special someone. In fact, if you're alone on the sappiest day of the year, you could use a joyous distraction. If you need plans, make sure to hit up one of the best hip-hop tours rolling through Boston next year as Chance the Rapper and Lil Yachty take over the TD Garden for "The Big Tour." Feb. 14, 2020, TD Garden, 100 Legends Way, tdgarden.com.

There's always something going on in Boston theater scene, but this winter, things will be especially busy. From performances by Hollywood A-listers to national tour stops of some of the most popular shows around, there's a lot going on. Here are five shows you won't want to miss in Boston this winter.

'Moby Dick'

Herman Melville's literary classic comes alive on stage this winter with the American Repertory Theater. The creative team behind A.R.T.'s production of "Natasha, Pierre & The Great Comet of 1812" has put together a musical version of this iconic tale about Captain Ahab and his infamous battle with the white whale. The show will have its world premiere at the Loeb Thrust in December. Dec. 3-Jan. 12, Loeb Drama Center, 64 Brattle St., Cambridge, americanrepertorytheater.org

'Cats'

Between the movie hitting the big screen on Dec. 20 and the live show coming to town in January, things are about to get a bit hairy in Boston. After you've seen the strange creatures strut their stuff in the film, head to the Citizens Bank Opera House to see the beloved musical by Andrew Lloyd Webber on stage when it comes to Boston this winter. Jan. 7-19, Citizens Bank Opera House, 539 Washington St., bostonopera-house.com

'Mean Girls'

This musical version of the fan-favorite comedy is pretty fetch. Hang out with Cady, Regina and the rest of the gang when "Mean Girls" takes the stage at the Citizens Bank Opera House later this winter. The show features music by Jeff Richmond and lyrics by Nell Benjamin, while the book was penned by none other than Tina Fey. Jan. 28-Feb. 9, Citizens Bank Opera House, 539 Washington St., bostonopera-house.com

'Sweat'

Kimberly Senior brings the Pulitzer Prize-winning and Tony Award-nominated Best Play by Lynn Nottage to life on stage in a production at Huntington Theatre. The acclaimed work revolves around a group of friends who struggle to stay connected as the factory industry crumbles in Reading, PA. Jan. 31-Feb. 23, Huntington Avenue Theatre, 264 Huntington Ave., huntingtontheatre.org

'Plaza Suite'

Possibly the most anticipated show on the list comes to the Emerson Colonial Theatre in February. Starring one of the best couples in Hollywood, two-time Emmy winner Sarah Jessica Parker and two-time Tony Award winner Matthew Broderick reunite on stage for the first time in decades in "Plaza Suite," Neil Simon's classic comedy which debuted at the venue in 1968. This new production, helmed by Tony Award winner John Benjamin Hickey, will serve as a short, three-week pre-Broadway engagement before the show ships out to the Big Apple. Feb. 5-22, Emerson Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., emersoncolonialtheatre.com

Hallelujah the Hills go through hell to create their lyrical masterpiece, "I'm You"

We spoke with singer-songwriter Ryan H. Walsh ahead of the album's release this Friday. PAT KING

Having artistic inclinations can be both a blessing and a curse. On one hand, the impulse to re-contextualize your surroundings into something that provides joy to others can provide you with a life of constant searching and creative drive. But for many, that need for answers can be like being sent up into space for a never-ending fact-finding mission. Writer and musician Ryan H. Walsh knows this feeling first-hand and isn't sure if he wants to come back to Earth yet.

With his long-running Boston indie-rock band Hallelujah the Hills, Walsh has maintained a respectable cult-like following, touring with bands like Titus Andronicus and even Silver Jews over the years. Last year, however, his public profile increased considerably with the release of his critically acclaimed book "Astral Weeks: A Secret History of 1968." In the book, Walsh paints a portrait of Massachusetts during the time Van Morrison was creating his spiritual and ethereal masterpiece in the Boston area.

Between researching, writing and promoting the book, Walsh's life began to make less and less sense. While the book was a success, it took a tremendous toll on both his personal life and mental well-being. It was time for him to face these problems head-on in the only way he truly knew how — by writing a new album. After a period of intense soul-searching, Walsh reconvened his band to record their eighth album, "I'm You." For Walsh, the songs included on this album were like a roadmap away from danger that he was drawing for himself in real-time.

"After the book came out then I started to have — whether this is related to the book or not — I turned out to have a really hard time and you know, depression and panic attacks and needing to live back with my parents for a while," explains Walsh. "At a certain point in those songs, I was trying to imagine a way back to what I felt was good. Where I felt good. Where I felt like myself. I was trying to write my way back there, which I certainly had never done before. And so that was a very strange, beautiful, surreal experience."

After working out these new songs with long-time band members David Michael Curry, Ryan Connelly, Brian Rutledge, Joseph Marrett and Nicholas Ward, "I'm You" began to take shape. The resulting album is Hallelujah the Hills' strongest to date and contains all of the elements long-time fans will love, but with a newfound sense of directness in Walsh's narratives, a new skill and feeling of urgency he attributes to his time in the trenches writing the interwoven storylines of "Astral Weeks" and the shellshock he felt when the experience was over.

"I felt like I had a new weapon," writing-wise. The book was a narrative story that made sense and so I was inspired. I thought maybe I could apply some of that learning to the songs. And try to be more clear about what I mean or tell stories in the songs more literally. I mean, I'm so proud of all the lyrics to come before this, but they aren't that good," laughs Walsh.

In a spirited verse in the album's nearly nine-minute title track, Walsh waxes poetic on subjects like creation, the give and take between the artist and their muse and the importance of different genres of music in his journey towards greater understanding. "Rock and roll improved my chemistry, and prog rock got me out of bed," he sings. "Punk rock made me hate the government, and heavy metal became my friend." He continues to describe how genres like R&B helped him to "dance with you" and how hip hop helped him to understand the workings of the universe. But the central conclusion he reaches is that music, no matter what style, helps to connect all of us. "Don't freak out," he declares as his typically smooth vocals begin to break, "I'm you."

"That section and that song came so quickly and naturally," explains Walsh. "I just was like, all right, I want to say one personal thing about every genre that I kind of adore, and there was no editing there was no re-dos in that order, broke them down and then tried to see if I could sing

it. It worked out (laughs)."

The album is being released independently this Friday, Nov. 15 with a local release show scheduled for Dec. 19th at Great Scott. During my conversation with Walsh, we land on a strange catch-22 with living life as a creative person. Even though the goal is to bring those who experience your art closer to each other, and to the artist sometimes, the creating can come with isolation in order to produce the necessary results.

"Music and art have ruined my life and it has also saved my life," says Walsh, which can certainly be the thesis of "I'm You."

"You know [it] takes a lot of solitude to make something," he adds. "Unless you're one of the lucky top-tier artists in the world you're probably always shuffling around money. So stability falls by the wayside. And yet, I don't know how to do anything else and I don't want to do anything else. That's just my instinct. It probably sounds nutty, but I stick by it."

Trump impeachment hearings focus on Ukraine pressure campaign in first day

William Taylor, a career diplomat, testified Wednesday.

The top U.S. diplomat in Ukraine, testifying in the first televised hearing of the impeachment inquiry against President Donald Trump, on Wednesday linked the president more directly to a pressure campaign on Ukraine to conduct investigations that would benefit him politically.

William Taylor was one of two career diplomats who testified before the U.S. House of Representatives Intelligence Committee as a crucial new phase began in the impeachment inquiry that threatens Trump's presidency even as he seeks re-election in 2020.

Both Taylor and George Kent testified

Chairman Adam Schiff (C), Democrat of California, gives an opening statement during the first public hearings held by the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence as part of the impeachment inquiry into U.S. President Donald Trump, with witnesses Ukrainian Ambassador William Taylor and Deputy Assistant Secretary George Kent testifying on Capitol Hill in Washington, DC. REUTERS about their concerns about pressure by Trump and allies to get Ukraine to investigate Democratic political rival Joe Biden in a dramatic hearing that pitted Democratic and Republican lawmakers against each other.

While the hearing turned contentious at times – including sniping between lawmakers – the low-key testimony given by the two witnesses may have fallen short of giving the Democrats the ammunition they need to advance their argument that Trump has committed misdeeds worthy of ousting him from office.

An important revelation came from Taylor, acting ambassador to Ukraine, who pointed to the Republican president's keen interest in getting Ukraine to investigate Biden, a former vice president, and reiterated his understanding that $391 million in U.S. security aid was withheld from Kiev unless it cooperated.

Taylor said a member of his staff overheard a July 26 phone call between Trump and Gordon Sondland, a former political donor appointed as a senior diplomat, in which the Republican president asked about those investigations and Sondland told him that the Ukrainians were ready to proceed.

Following the call – which occurred a day after Trump had asked Ukraine's president during a phone call to conduct these investigations – the staff member asked Sondland, the U.S. ambassador to the European Union, what Trump thought about Ukraine, Taylor said.

"Ambassador Sondland responded that President Trump cares more about the investigations of Biden, which Giuliani was pressing for," Taylor testified, referring to Trump's personal lawyer Rudy Giuliani.

Asked by Adam Schiff, the committee's Democratic chairman, if that meant Trump cared more about the investigations than about Ukraine, Taylor said, "Yes, sir."

David Holmes, a Taylor aide subpoenaed to testify behind closed doors next week to the impeachment inquiry, is the Taylor staffer who overheard the call that Sondland made to Trump from Ukraine, said a person familiar with the issue.

Republican lawmakers called Taylor's account hearsay and noted that Ukraine's president has not said he felt pressured by Trump.

With a potential television audience of tens of millions looking on, Schiff opened the historic session – the first impeachment drama in two decades – in an ornate hearing room packed with journalists, lawmakers and members of the public. The hearing lasted 5-1/2 hours from start to finish. REUTERS

Here's what Americans really think about Thanksgiving foods

A new study by Grubhub shows just what Americans are really eating and enjoying on Thanksgiving. The study breaks down what dishes are the most coveted during this holiday season, and some of the results are quite shocking.

It turns out that Thanksgiving's most popular foods are breakfast options. The study shows that Belgian waffles, chocolate chip pancakes, eggs benedict, corned beef hash and egg, and French toast rose most in popularity on Thanksgiving Day compared to other Thursdays in November 2018. Surprisingly, folks are opting for sweet options pre-turkey.

Turkey – perhaps the dish most synonymous with Thanksgiving – isn't actually consumed in its highest annual quantities on Thanksgiving Day. The number one holiday surpassing Thanksgiving for turkey-lovers is actually New Year's Eve.

Although turkey is well-loved on its own, the most popular turkey dishes in 2019 are turkey cranberry melt, turkey bacon, turkey bacon avocado wrap, honey glazed turkey, and a turkey and bacon club. It's interesting to note that the turkey cranberry melt that tops the lists is reminiscent of a Thanksgiving meal.

Other Thanksgiving favorites are desserts, specifically pies. When it comes to Thanksgiving pies, usually folks think about pumpkin pie and sweet potato pie; however, those are not the most sought after pies this holiday season. Pumpkin pie and sweet potato pie didn't even rank in the top five favorite pies.

The study shows that the most popular Thanksgiving pies are not what you might think. The most popular Thanksgiving pies are lemon meringue pie, blueberry pie, coconut custard pie and pecan pie – with apple rounding out the top five.

When people are tired of their leftovers, they tend to go for Tex-Mex and Asian-inspired dishes post-Thanksgiving. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Here are the most popular dishes for the weekend after Thanksgiving, according to Grubhub:

- Beef barbacoa taco
- Ramen bowl
- Cheesy chicken empanada
- Tofu miso soup
- Steamed shrimp shumai

Former Massachusetts governor Deval Patrick joining race for White House

The field already contains nearly 20 candidates.

Former Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick has told supporters he will join the Democratic race and run for president, media outlets including the New York Times reported on Wednesday.

Patrick, who was the state's first African-American governor and is close to former President Barack Obama, is widely respected within the Democratic party but faces a steep uphill climb if he joins the race.

He would join a field of nearly 20 candidates vying for the party's nod to run against Republican Donald Trump in 2020, most of whom have failed to win more than a few percentage points of support in national and state polls. He has already missed deadlines to get on the ballot in Alabama and Arkansas, as well as for the party's upcoming debate in Atlanta.

The field is currently dominated by former Vice President Joe Biden, a moderate, and two liberals: U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts and U.S. Senator Bernie Sanders of Vermont.

On Tuesday, former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg also took steps to underpin a possible run, filing paperwork to appear on the primary ballot in Arkansas. The same day, former Democratic standard-bearer Hillary Clinton gained attention when she refused to rule out a possible run in a BBC interview.

Patrick, 63, is a Harvard-trained lawyer and two-term former governor who has been working as a managing director of Boston investment firm Bain Capital since 2015, running a socially responsible investing fund. REUTERS

TRAVEL

Here's why Aruba should be on your bucket list.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Are you looking for somewhere warm and sunny to go this holiday season? Do you dream about white sand beaches and aquamarine oceans? If your answer is yes, look no further than Aruba. The Caribbean island is a popular spot to visit for a multitude of reasons. Here are a few reasons why you should visit:

- The beaches look surreal. They literally look like a postcard. From my personal experience, they look exactly the way they do on Instagram, which blew my mind. #NoFilterNeeded

- If you're worried about a language barrier, don't! There is none since most island residents speak four or more languages; if you're lucky, some locals might even teach you a bit about their local language, Papiamentu.

If you need even more reasons to visit this island paradise, look no further. I had a chance to check out the best spots to stay, eat, drink and shop.

Where to stay:

Manchebo Beach Resort & Spa

Manchebo is home to part of the world-famous Eagle Beach, which is ranked as one of the best beaches worldwide. It's one of the most beautiful beaches I've seen in my entire life. It has white sand, and the ocean is a gorgeous shade of blue. The resort has countless amenities, including multiple restaurants (there's a restaurant for everyone's taste, I promise). The hotel also has an incredible spa, where you can book a treatment in a cabana. The cabanas face the luscious beach, which is sure to leave you feeling fully immersed in vacation mode.

What to do:

Arikok National Park

Arikok National Park takes up 19 percent of the entire island of Aruba. There is so much to see and explore in the park: from its otherworldly landscape to its historic sites – there is something for everyone here. When going to Arikok, I recommend booking a Jeep tour with De Palm Tours. You can also hike within the park; in fact, there are countless miles of trails within the island. Some highlights of the park are the natural pool, which is a stunning non-human-made pool filled with ocean water, where you can swim around safely. Another highlight for me was the Bushiribana Gold Mill Ruins, which you can go in and explore (make sure to wear proper footwear). The caves are another cool spot to explore, and within the caves, you can witness perfectly preserved cave drawings. When I visited, I spoke to Julio Beaujon about the park, and he told me that within the park, "... you're getting to know the real Aruba."

Aruba Art Mural Tours

If you're an urban explorer like me, you need to check out a tour of San Nicolas. San Nicolas used to be known as a more run-down part of the island. But in the past few years, it has had a renaissance when it comes to art. A man named Tito Bolivar saw an opportunity to help grow the art culture on the island and started ArtisA, a gallery, shop, events and tour company. You can book a guided tour of all of the striking street art in San Nicolas. Bonus: it makes for a killer Instagram photo.

Where to eat and drink:

The Secret Garden

If you want to get seriously local, starting in January, you can book a dinner at The Secret Garden, where you can dine on a meal prepared by local chef Tina Causey-Bislick. You can opt for three different dining experiences, which include vegan tastings twice a week and two Cunucu Table tastings a week (not-vegan). The Cunucu Table tastings focus on local cuisine with a gourmet flair. I had a plant-based meal, and it was incredible. I spoke with Causey-Bislick and she said she was inspired to create this experience because, "Arubans love to share their homes, they love to entertain locals not just in the resorts but all the time you'll find Arubans inviting tourists to their homes and entertaining them and sharing their family with them," and she wanted to do the same.

The West Deck

Another wonderful local spot, owned by a family for close to twenty years. This restaurant is situated on the water, and you can get some famous local dishes such as the full fried red snapper, Keeshi Yena (my favorite Aruban dish), and their famous plantains. If you're looking for a bit of a break from the beach but still want to be outdoors, this is the spot for you, since you can enjoy a delightful picnic.

Apotheek: remedy cocktail bar

The brand-new bar is the first speakeasy on the entire island of Aruba ... how cool is that? The bar is inspired by an apothecary, and in fact, when you first enter the space, that's precisely what it looks like. They have a few main cocktails, but they rotate out additional cocktails seasonally. I spoke with the head bartender of Apotheek, and he told me that if you come to visit, he suggests testing out their Doctor on Duty cocktail or their Watermelon kick drink.

Zeerovers

Zeerovers is a famous spot on the island and a local favorite. The lines are always long and that's for a good reason. At Zeerovers, you can see the entire ocean to table process from the butchering of the fish to the frying of the fish. The food is excellent (make sure you try the cornbread), and while you're there, pick up the island brew called "Chill." The beer pairs perfectly with everything on the menu. This spot is cash only.

What to buy:

Naomi Style Cunucu

Local artist Naomi Landgraf creates mini versions of traditional Aruban-style homes called Cunucus. The houses are beautiful and vibrant, and they can still be spotted across the island. If you love small, easy to travel with local items, this is the perfect souvenir. You can pick up her items from Cosecha Aruba.

Tangerine

Tangerine is a single-man operation, owned by a gentleman named Ash. He creates hand-crafted bags that are super sturdy and perfect for any traveler. His bags are inspired by the colors of the Caribbean, and many of his bags feature sailing material. Pick up his bags at his storefront, Tangerine.

DANNY PICARD

Listen to "The Danny Picard Show" on iTunes and Spotify. Subscribe at YouTube.com/DannyPicard.

Last year, it was Patrick Mahomes. This year, it's Lamar Jackson. Before them, it was anyone other than the Patriots.

Not necessarily in Vegas, and certainly not here in New England, but throughout the rest of the country, NFL hot-takers have been begging for someone to be "the guy" that knocks Tom Brady and Bill Belichick off the top of the mountain in the AFC. This year is no different, even if the Patriots are currently the favorite to win Super Bowl LIV at +250. Still, the talk of the league is Jackson and the 7-2 Baltimore Ravens entering Week 11.

The 8-1 Patriots are coming off their Week 10 bye to face the Eagles in Philadelphia this Sunday at 4:25 p.m., continuing the Pats' toughest stretch of the season, followed by games against Dallas, at Houston and then against Kansas City.

Baltimore hosts the 6-3 Houston Texans this Sunday at 1 p.m. in a battle for the all-important head-to-head playoff tiebreaker. The Ravens already own one head-to-head tiebreaker over New England after defeating the Patriots in Week 9, handing the Pats their first loss of the season.

It was an impressive win on the national NBC "Sunday Night Football" stage. And right now, as the No. 2 seed in the AFC playoff picture, Baltimore looks like the real deal with a five-game win streak. If they can also beat Houston, the already-high praise for the Ravens might rise to a whole new level.

I'm here to respond to all that hysteria with a more realistic take: Jackson will not beat the Patriots again this season.

Obviously, they won't play a second time in the regular season. But if Baltimore lives up to the hype and meets the Patriots in the playoffs, then I've got some bad news for everyone who's already crowned Jackson and the Ravens as the AFC's next big thing.

And I don't want to have to do this. I don't want to be that guy. But they're forcing me to do it with their constant overreactions about an exciting young player who I hope has a long and successful NFL career.

Jackson is maybe the most exciting player in the league right now. There seemingly isn't much he can't do. And his speed and athleticism makes him nearly unstoppable at times.

But a day after the Ravens whooped the now 0-9 Cincinnati Bengals this past Sunday, former NFL quarterback and current ESPN analyst Dan Orlovsky called Baltimore's offense "indefensible."

Orlovsky was responding to colleague Mike Greenberg, who said, "What we see from Lamar Jackson, we have to stop asking, 'Is it sustainable?' We have to start asking, 'How do you stop it?'" Keep in mind, this is after the Ravens beat the winless Bengals.

Well, if you can find a way to stop it, then Jackson's dominance will not be sustainable. And if anyone's going to stop it, it's going to be Belichick, if he's given a second chance to do so in the playoffs.

Jackson threw for one touchdown and ran for two touchdowns in Baltimore's Week 9 win over the Patriots. Through nine games this season, Jackson has 15 touchdown passes. Eight of those touchdown passes have come against two of the worst teams in the NFL, Cincinnati and Miami. That means, in the other seven games, Jackson is averaging just one touchdown pass per game.

Lamar Jackson and the Ravens are the flavor of the month.

GETTY IMAGES

However, Jackson's 702 rush yards and six rushing touchdowns have proven that he doesn't have to throw the ball to get his team in the end zone. Right now, that's working out wonderfully for a Ravens team that's seeing praise from anyone who has a live microphone in front of them.

But as a former NFL coach once said, "If you want to crown them, then crown their [expletive]!"

Will Jackson and the Ravens be crowned AFC champions after a potential rematch in Foxboro on Jan. 19?

I wouldn't put my money on it.

Thursday Night Football betting preview

Go to MetroBet.us for the top sports betting offers in the U.S.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

The NFL's top underachiever in 2019, the Browns, take on the league's top overachiever, the Steelers, tonight on Thursday Night Football.

It's a highly intriguing betting game, in that both teams' weekly spreads have been out of whack all year. That's to be somewhat expected for two public teams like the Browns and Steelers, but sportsbooks really don't really know what to make of either of them week-to-week in this particular season.

Most books finally got a grasp on Cleveland this past Sunday, when the Browns were three-point favorites over the then-6-2 Bills. The final score? Browns 19, Bills 16.

As crazy as it sounds, the Browns might finally be ready to turn this thing around. It's almost certainly too late for a playoff run, but beating the 5-4 Steelers at home tonight is far from an impossibility.

GETTY IMAGES

The Browns have had a brutal schedule over the course of the past month or so as they lost at San Francisco, at home to Seattle, at New England and at Denver. The only loss to a bad team in that grouping was the Broncos, but even that is somewhat excusable considering that Mile High Stadium is one of the more difficult places to play in the league.

The Steelers, on the other hand, have taken advantage of a quirk in their schedule in that they've played just one road game in the past two months. That game was at the Chargers on a Sunday night, where the crowd was 95 percent Pittsburgh fans. It should also be noted that Mason Rudolph did not start that game due to injury, as it was Devlin Hodges that led Pittsburgh to victory over a Chargers squad that was entirely lost at the time.

For all of his faults this year I still trust Baker Mayfield at home, a hell of a lot more than I trust Rudolph on the road.

You can also run on this Steelers defense, which is allowing 105.3 yards per game on the ground (16th in the NFL). Expect the tag team of Nick Chubb and the recently reinstated Kareem Hunt to thrive.

The play: Browns -2.5

3 things to watch for as Pats face Eagles

The Patriots will look to avenge their Super Bowl LII loss this Sunday in Philly.

matt.burke@metro.us

Here are three things to watch for as the Patriots take on the Eagles this Sunday in Philadelphia (4:25 p.m., CBS).

The difference makers

In the Super Bowl LII loss to the Eagles, the Patriots were missing their best offensive player not named Tom Brady as Julian Edelman was out that entire campaign with an ACL injury. The Pats were also missing, arguably, their best defensive player in that game as Dont'a Hightower tore one of his pecs earlier in the year.

The Pats will, of course, have both players raring to go in this one.

The Eagles, meanwhile, won't be trotting out the Super Bowl LII MVP in this one as Nick Foles took his talents to Northeast Florida this past spring.

We have no idea if Carson Wentz is up to the challenge of beating a New England scheme, though we may have gotten a clue back in late September when Wentz was so-so against Matt Patricia's Lions (a 27-24 Eagles home loss).

Rush to judgment

The days in which people were praising the Patriots as having the greatest defense of all-time already seem like eons ago. Mark Ingram (115 yards) and Lamar Jackson (61 yards) ran roughshod over the Pats defense in the 37-20 loss to Baltimore, and even before then the Pats' rush defense showed it was susceptible to the big play. Cleveland's Nick Chubb busted for a 44-yard gain against the Pats in late October, and old man Frank Gore broke off a 41-yarder in the Pats' narrow win at Buffalo back in September.

The Eagles are 11th in the NFL in rushing yardage per game, but have been more impressive of late as they're giving the ball to rookie Miles Sanders more, and Jordan Howard has broken out of his early-season funk.

Belichick's revenge

The Super Bowl LII loss to the Eagles was one of the more embarrassing moments of Bill Belichick's career. His decision to bench Malcolm Butler was the No. 1 blame for why the Eagles were able to put up a whopping 41 points.

That said, that subpar Patriots defense was one Patricia — not Belichick — had his hands all over. These days, it certainly seems as though Belichick is the one calling the shots on defense.

Offensively, people forget that the Pats were just fine in Super Bowl LII as they put up 33 points and Tom Brady posted a Super Bowl record 505 passing yards despite Edelman's absence. Eagles defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz remains in Philly, and that's a good thing for the Pats given what happened the last time out, and given that the Eagles secondary is allowing 239.0 yards of passing per game this season (16th in the NFL).

GETTY IMAGES

Top NFL teams falling flat

Last Sunday's bye helped the Patriots dodge all the potholes that were slowing down other top Super Bowl contenders. A great week to have your car in the shop!

With New Orleans (9/2 at the respected Westgate in Las Vegas ... an 18 percent win equivalent), and San Francisco (7/1, 13 percent) both losing as home favorites to make their long trek toward a Lombardi Trophy more treacherous, the Pats stood pat atop the futures board (5/2, 29 percent).

Blossoming AFC power Baltimore (6/1, 14 percent) also stayed in place because it was supposed to crush Cincinnati and did.

Big risers were Green Bay (up to 10/1, 9 percent) after holding off Carolina in a second-half snowstorm, Minnesota (up to 14/1, 7 percent) after scoring a Sunday night upset in Dallas and Seattle (up to 20/1, 5 percent) after upsetting San Francisco Monday night.

Fast fallers were Kansas City (down to 12/1, 8 percent) after its soft defense was exposed again in a loss at Tennessee, Dallas (40/1, 2.4 percent) after losing to Minnesota and the Los Angeles Rams (50/1, 2 percent) after their offensive nightmare in Pittsburgh.

Remember that sportsbooks build universes larger than 100 percent to create a house edge. Odds equivalents for playoff contenders will typically surge past the century mark even before you get to longer shots.

New England is back on the field Sunday at Philadelphia (25/1, 4 percent). Both teams had an extra week to prepare. The point spread has been stuck on Patriots -3.5 all week. That's telling because the key number of three typically serves as a magnet. Not happening yet, which tells you that sharps (professional bettors) aren't interested in this underdog ... and that oddsmakers know their sportsbooks would get flooded with Patriots money if -3 went on the board.

Head coach Bill Belichick has a reputation for getting results after a bye week. Some bettors are also enamored with the "Super Bowl revenge" angle. Philadelphia upset New England 41-33 on the first Sunday in February of 2018. This is their first meeting since.

Other Notes

"In the NHL, the Bruins have a tough weekend ahead with a back-to-back games against potential playoff opponents. They visit Toronto Friday for the second time in two weeks (Leafs won the opener 4-3 in a shoot-out). That's followed by a home game Saturday against Washington, which currently sits atop the Metropolitan Division and possesses the highest point total in the Eastern Conference. It's the first 2019-20 collision with the Caps.

Boston's penchant for blowouts has made them a profitable bet on the puck line (laying -1.5 goals at much more favorable odds). Washington's been a consistent money maker after a slow start. Toronto's burned cash after entering the campaign as favorites at some sports books to win the East.

"The Celtics begin a five-game-in-eight-days Western swing Friday night at Golden State. That's followed by a back-to-back Sunday and Monday in Sacramento and Phoenix (keep an eye on the Suns!), then games Wednesday and Friday against the Los Angeles Clippers and Denver, respectively. Boston's been one of the biggest money makers for bettors so far this NBA season ... but so have the Suns and Clippers.

CITATION GIVING NOTICE OF PETITION FOR APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIAN FOR INCAPACITATED PERSON PURSUANT TO

G.L. c. 190B, §5-304

Docket No. SU19P2113GD

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

The Trial Court

Probate and Family Court

In the matter of: Maureen Lawrence

Of: Revere, MA

RESPONDENT

Alleged Incapacitated Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center of Boston, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that Maureen Lawrence is in need of a Guardian and requesting that John Odams of Weymouth, MA (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Guardian to serve Without Surety on the bond.

Suffolk Probate and Family Court

24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is incapacitated, that the appointment of a Guardian is necessary, and that the proposed Guardian is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court and may contain a request for certain specific authority.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 11/29/2019. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. Brian J. Dunn, First Justice of this Court.

Date: November 05, 2019
